General outside view of the office and warehouses and a daffodill field in front. The warehouse, connected to the home, is mainly for storing of planting stock of hyacinths and tulip bulbs. These bulbs are stored from lifting-time in July untill planting-time in October. All export compartments and packingrooms are located behind this building and at the rear of the office.

This is the front of our new home-office at Noordwijkerhout Holland. The Office is directly connected with the packing-place and warehouses.

An inside view of the packing-place with the entrance at the rear.
 All orders are packed and shipped from this place.

An inside view of one of our storing-compartments. All tulips and Hyacinths are stored in tray-cases untill packing starts. This way of storing, gives all bulbs a most evenly divided temperature and fresh air at any time during the storing. Warm air is blown in by ventilators through the canals on the ceiling. Fresh air is sucked into the room through the heaters and is replaced 15 times per hour. Circulation is made by other ventilators, sothat the bulbs receive different air about 500 times each hour. Temperature and fresh air supply is controlled by thermostats at any time.

A view in the packing-place looking at the entrances of the storing-compartments of the bulbs. After the bulbs are lifted, cleaned and graded, the export sizes are stored in these compartments untill the packing and shipping starts.

Preventing spitting or casting of buds ("loose buds").

Some varieties may "spit out" or drop flower buds. These "loose buds" are developed while the bulbs are in the plunging bed. To avoid them:

- a) Do not plant too early.
- b) Check the drainage in the plunging bed. Make sure bulbs are not getting too much water.
- c) Do not let the temperature in the plunging bed get much higher than 48° F. especially about 6 to 8 weeks after planting bulbs.

If the weather is cold at the time when the pots are transferred from the plunging bed to the greenhouse, the transferring should then be done very quickly.

Darwin Tulips

"HIGHLIGHTS OF THE GARDEN"

No other Tulips equal the Darwin Tulips in splendor and usefulness for various purposes.

Introduced into Holland some fifty years ago, Darwin Tulips soon found their way into gardens all over the world and were eagerly accepted by the floristtrade. Demand increases from year to year. Since their introduction, many beautiful new varieties have been developed and were received with enthusiasm by the public, but some of the first introduced varieties, such as Clara Butt, Farncombe Sanders, La Tulipe Noire, Pride of Haarlem and others still rank high among the popular varieties.

Blooming in May, carried on strong, erect stems, the Darwin Tulips with their stately beauty and gorgeous colors, red, pink, lavender, purple, black, yellow and white are ideal for all garden purposes and excellent for cutflowers. Many varieties can also be successfully forced for cutting and in pots and pans. Some for Valentine Day and others for Easter pots.

When planted under so called "cold glass" in good soil, and thus coming into bloom protected from bad weather, Darwin Tulips will produce a rich crop of clean strong flowers before the bulbs grown outside are in bloom.

Parrot Tulips

The ever increasing demand for these Tulips clearly shows the growing appreciation for the remarkable beauty of the Parrot Tulips with their elegant lacineated flowers.

They bloom in May.

On account of their large, heavy flowers Parrot Tulips are not recommended for planting in beds. In groups and in borders, they are very effective. Excellent for cutflowers. Placed in shallow bowls or dishes when cut, they make a very artistic effect on tables.

GLADIOLUS

Flowering period:

1 = early, 2 = medium, 3 = late

We believe there is no other class of bulbs in which so many new and beautiful varieties have been developed as in Gladiolus.

The following collection is of outstanding value in which all colors of the rainbow are represented.

No wonder the demand for Gladiolus increases from year to year.

Ideal for cutflowers and growing in almost any soil with little care, they are of great value also for gardening purposes and when planted at intervals from Spring till June, Gladiolus offer the gardener a crop of cutflowers all through the summer until the frost sets in.

LILIUM

Lilies belong to the most beautiful flowers.
The well known Easter Lily takes a prominent place in the florist trade, specially for Easter forcing. Liliium longiflorum in varieties, Croft Lilies and others are largely used for this purpose. As they are not grown in Holland in large quantities, they are not mentioned in our list. There are however some varieties being developed in Holland which are very promising for the future for this purpose.
Of the varieties mentioned in our list, Regale Speciosum and the Umbellatum varieties are also good for greenhouse culture. All Lilies mentioned in our list are splendid for gardening, they do excellently in borders, if planted in suitable spots.
The following Lilies are shipped in late fall and during the winter and early spring.
